

PVC optical cable conduit materials

Overview

PVC (Polyvinyl Chloride) conduit is a popular choice for both indoor and outdoor fiber optic cable installations. Made from various materials, these conduits protect the delicate fiber optic cables from physical damage, environmental hazards, and mechanical stress, which could otherwise. Fiber optic cables are delicate despite their advanced design. They contain glass or plastic fibers that transmit data through light signals. To ensure these cables perform optimally, they must be shielded from environmental factors, physical damage, and interference. Manufactured in Germany, our products meet the highest quality and material standards and impress with. One of the simplest, most cost-effective methods is using a PVC Split Pipe, also called Split PVC Conduit, to shield direct burial drop cables at exposed or high-risk points. Backed by more than five decades of experience and innovation within the cable industry, Allwire can help you choose the optimum conduit material according to your unique project needs and specifications.
